

HLTH 2212 : Introduction to Health Education and Wellness Education

An overview of the role health and wellness educators play in our society through community and individual health promotion and education. Introduction to the founding principles, models, theories, and practices of the profession from historical and contemporary perspectives. Ethical principles, responsibilities and competencies, and Ethical principles, responsibilities and competencies, and explored, as well as relevant research, resources, current issues and future trends in the field. Prerequisite: Eligible to enroll in ENGL 1010.

Credits 3.0

Semester Offered

As Needed